Charles S. Corprew, Ph.D. Joins 757 Collab as Senior Venture Partner

[Norfolk, VA] – 757 Collab, a dynamic venture hub for innovation and collaboration in Norfolk, VA, is thrilled to announce the appointment of Charles S. Corprew, Ph.D., as its inaugural Senior Venture Partner. Dr. Corprew will play a pivotal role across the organization, particularly in guiding, advising, and investing resources into highly scalable, high-growth ventures within the 757 Collab ecosystem.

“Dr. Corprew brings a wealth of entrepreneurial experience, strategic vision, and leadership to our community, further strengthening 757 Collab's commitment to fostering innovation, inclusivity, and impact,” notes Paul Nolde, Executive Managing Director of 757 Collab. “His extensive background in academia and entrepreneurship, coupled with a proven track record of success in investing in impactful ventures, makes him a valuable addition to the collaborative spirit that defines 757 Collab.”

Upon accepting his new role, Dr. Charles S. Corprew expressed his excitement: “I am honored to join 757 Collab. This is an exciting opportunity to contribute to the vibrant innovation ecosystem of 757 Region and beyond, to bring more awareness and resources to diverse and untapped founders, and to work alongside the brilliant minds that define 757 Collab.”

A native of the 757, Dr. Corprew is a proud Green Run Stallion, JMU Duke, NSU Spartan (#Behold), and Tulane Green Wave. Before embarking on his career in entrepreneurship and investing, Charles was a psychology teacher at Green Run High School and an Assistant Professor of Psychological Science at Loyola University New Orleans. Dr. Corprew began his investing journey with Camelback Ventures, where he was the Director of the Education and Conscious Tech Fellowship. Camelback Ventures focuses on ensuring that underrepresented and untapped founders have a way to bring their genius to the world. In his free time, he hosts the acclaimed global podcast, “The What’s Your Revolution?” show.
